Frommer's Review

This is my favorite hotel in the area, set on a hillside across the river from and overlooking the Copán archaeological site. The rustic elegance of the rooms is a throwback to its former life as a farm and ranch, as are the high wood-beam and plank ceilings. The large rooms each are outfitted with two queen-size beds, a large shared veranda with hammocks, and a beautiful stone shower. However, TV and Internet are not available. The hotel restaurant has excellent meals, and on my last visit, they were preparing to build a yoga platform overlooking the river and ruins. The hotel abuts the Los Sapos ruins, and has several excellent hiking trails on its grounds. Sunsets are taken in on a long lawn off of the main lodge building.
